Dubai Economy Tracker broadly stable in July

The Emirates NBD Dubai Economy Tracker Index (DETI) was broadly unchanged in July at 56.3, still signaling robust expansion in the non-oil private sector. Output (61.0) and new orders (62.0) increased sharply in July, although the output index was slightly lower than in June. Firms attributed the rise in business activity to “favourable economic conditions and more projects”.

Employment growth was marginal however, despite the strong rise in output and new work. Market conditions remained competitive and firms reduced selling prices on average in July, although the decline was marginal with the output price index only a touch below the neutral 50.0 level at 49.6. Nevertheless, the inability of firms to pass on rising input costs to consumers is likely a key factor behind sluggish employment growth.

Stocks of purchases (inventories) rose at a solid pace in July, although the index was down from June. Firms remained optimistic overall about the prospects for order growth over the coming twelve months.

Wholesale & retail trade index slightly lower than June

The wholesale & retail trade sector index eased slightly to 57.9 in July from 58.0 in June, still reflecting a sharp improvement in output and new work last month. However, the faster growth in the volume of new orders recorded last month was partly driven by extensive price discounting and other promotional activities: selling prices declined at the fastest rate in five months in July. The decline in output prices even as input costs continued to rise highlights the continued pressure on margins, in the context of a competitive environment.

Encouragingly, firms in the wholesale and retail sector increased hiring in July, with the employment index rising to 52.0 from 50.5 in June. While this reflects relatively modest employment gains, the reading is the highest since May 2016.

Overall, firms in the wholesale & retail trade sector remain optimistic about the coming year, but the level of optimism is lower than in Q1 2017.

Travel & tourism sector index rises in July

The headline travel & tourism sector index rose to 56.3 in July from 54.4 in June, the highest reading in 3 months. Both output/ activity (60.1) and new orders (61.1) increased at a faster rate last month. Some of the rise in output and new order was likely due to further promotional discounting: prices charged declined on average for the fourth month in a row.

However, employment increased marginally in July (51.0), reversing a slight drop in June. Business expectations for the coming twelve months were also higher in July, with businesses in this sector more optimistic than those in construction and wholesale & retail trade sectors.

Construction sector saw slower expansion in July

The construction sector index declined to 54.8 in July from 57.4 in June, reflecting a slower rate of growth. Both output (59.0) and new work (59.0) still increased at a sharp rate last month however. Employment also increased – albeit marginally – after declining in June.

Firms in the construction sector continued to enjoy some pricing power, as selling prices increased for the third month in a row, helping to offset the impact of rising input costs.

Business optimism for the coming year also improved in July, with respondents citing Expo 2020 as a key factor in their anticipation of future output growth.
